Dear Representative Schakowsky:

The undersigned national organizations of the Mental Health Liaison Group are pleased to write in support of the Mental Health on Campus Improvement Act, important legislation that will assist colleges and universities in successfully addressing the growing mental health needs of campus communities.

According to research done by Columbia University, almost one half of college age students suffer from mental health disorders, including addictions, but less than one in four are seeking treatment. Further, a 2004 Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration Report entitled, "Promoting Mental Health and Preventing Suicide in College and University Settings" noted that major life transitions, such as leaving home and going to college can exacerbate existing psychological difficulties and trigger new ones. It further notes, "leaving family and peer supports to enter an unfamiliar environment with higher academic standards can deepen depression or heighten anxiety." Finally, the spring 2010 American College Health Association's National College Health Assessment found that 30.7 % of students reported "feeling so depressed it was difficult to function" during the last year period and 45.6% reported "feelings that were hopeless" during the same period. Unfortunately, many colleges and universities are ill-equipped to address the mental health needs of their communities.

In an effort to address these serious problems that can lead to academic failure or in the most extreme case, suicide, The Mental Health on Campus Improvement Act aims to maximize the likelihood that students who require mental health treatment receive it and to ensure that their problems do not reach that crisis level before services become available. To achieve this, the bill establishes grants to eligible colleges and universities to foster a comprehensive approach to campus behavioral health issues, including promotion of mental health, prevention of behavioral health disorders, expanding campus mental health services and mental health training, education and outreach, and developing and disseminating best practices to other colleges and universities.

The legislation also calls for the establishment of a national public education campaign, focusing upon mental health and behavioral health on college campuses. Such a campaign would assist in improving the understanding of mental health and mental disorders, and serve to encourage help seeking behaviors.
